INTRODUCTION
AND DEDICATION
SOMETIME ABOUT 1770
the coastal population of Great Britain and Ireland changed their attitude towards the harvest of shipwreck
and began the germ of a service to rescue people
from the wrecks which were a common feature of most maritime neighbourhoods.

The movement
may well have started in Bamburgh,
but everywhere the soil was ripe.

AT FIRST
such services were carried out in local boats.
They were what the Lifeboat Institution
now calls ‘Shoreboat Services’;
but by 1790
a specialised boat had been called for & designed which somewhat lessened the risks.
The Greathead Lifeboat of 1790
These names are inscribed in the following pages out of gratitude both to those who bore them and to their un-named predecessors for having so raised the character of our peoples. Together with all their comrades they share the credit of not having flinched before the uncompromising sea.
This is the spirit
which animates & has animated all alike
from the very beginning, & which has brought this Book into being

Note on the Binding
The Boards are from the oak knees used in building Lifeboats.
THE GREATHEAD LIFEBOAT

with acknowledgements to R. Ackermann

1878
served successfully for forty years & some twenty-three similar boats found places in Britain. None the less casualties must have been heavy, though there are few records to guide one to an estimate.

THOSE WHO UNDERTOOK THIS WORK set an example to civilisation which has today been followed by a great part of Western Europe.

THE ROYAL NATIONAL LIFEBOAT INSTITUTION was founded in 1824 to supply equipment and to co-ordinate local efforts; but as it only gradually acquired the allegiance of individual Lifeboat stations through its services its record of the names of those who died in the work only begins in 1854.
While all those who are known to have given their lives in the service are inscribed, many names remain unrecorded here.
